Reading SkillsLevel

Test takers who receive a score at the HIGH level, as you did, typically understand academic texts in English that require a wide range of reading abilities regardless of the difficulty of the texts.

Test takers who score at the HIGH level, typically

- have a very good command of academic vocabulary and grammatical structure;
- can understand and connect information, make appropriate inferences, and synthesize ideas, even when the text is conceptually dense and the language is complex;
- can recognize the expository organization of a text and the role that specific information serves within the larger text, even when the text is conceptually dense; and

Listening SkillsLevel*Your Performance

Test takers who receive a score at the HIGH level, as you did, typically understand conversations and lectures in English that present a wide range of listening demands. These demands can include difficult vocabulary (uncommon terms, or colloquial or figurative language), complex grammatical structures, abstract or complex ideas, and/or making sense of unexpected or seemingly contradictory information.

When listening to lectures and conversations like these, test takers at the HIGH level typically can

- understand main ideas and important details, whether they are stated or implied;
- distinguish more important ideas from less important ones;
- understand how information is being used (for example, to provide evidence for a claim or describe a step in a complex process);
- recognize how pieces of information are connected (for example, in a cause-and-effect relationship);

CELTA

Cambridge Certificate in Teaching English to Speakers of Other Languages

Andrea Brezanová

attended 120 out of 120 hours of the CELTA course at AKCENT International House Prague from 21st July to 15th August 2008
and was awarded the following grade:

Pass

Overall Assessment

Andrea came to the course with little previous EFL teaching experience and made pleasing progress, especially in the last stages of the course. She was hard-working and worked well with her colleagues. In addition, she tried hard to incorporate what she learnt from lesson feedback and input into her teaching. Her written work was clearly written. With further guidance and experience she should become an effective teacher of English as a foreign language.

Lesson Planning Skills

Andrea learnt to identify appropriate aims and to plan lessons in order to achieve those aims. She was able to take into account the needs of her students as well as their learning background. She could adapt materials to ensure that her lessons achieved their aims. She incorporated a good variety of activities and varied her feedback stages. Her lesson planning skills met the requirements of the course.

Classroom Teaching Skills

Andrea interacted well with the students and developed a confident classroom presence. She is sensitive to her students' needs, provides a supportive learning environment and deals well with student contributions. On a number of occasions she corrected their errors effectively and sensitively. She was able to clarify grammar and vocabulary well and provide useful practice of target language. Andrea needed to learn to give instructions clearly and worked on this successfully, which allowed lessons to proceed smoothly. She needs to continue to work on this and the clarity of her classroom language. Her classroom teaching skills met the standard required for the course.
